ALL OF THE LARGER VESSELS EXCEPT THE TEXAS TO BE COMPLETED BEFORE THE

END OF THE MONTH-THE VESUVIUS ALL RIGHT-PLANS FOR A

SAILORS' REST.

With the triple-screw cruiser Columbia, more familiarly known as the pirate, in the timber dock at the Navy Yard, and the Massachusetts the only one left of the larger vessels in need of attention at the hands of the refitters and repairers, there is a prospect that the end of the month will see the yard pretty well cleared of war ships fitted for active service, excepting, of course, the Texas, which is apparently a fixture at her mooring place over by the Cob Dock wall. The Montgomery is ready for sea and will start for Hampton Roads to-morrow, being followed in a few days by the Marblehead, according to the present programme. The work on the Columbia will require at least a week, although she will come out of the dock early this week. The ram Katahdin, and the monitors Puritan and Terror are still "on the hooks," and just what they will do and just when they will do it, are things yet to be determined. There has been considerable comment caused by the publication of the expense of keeping the big ships in fighting trim, and people who are not acquainted with the details are wondering how it is that it costs so much more to keep a war ship going than it does a liner. There are numerous answers to the question, any one of which is sufficient, one of them being that the liners are not expected to do the work called for when a war ship is spoken of, and that the difference in construction is the great factor in the difference in the cost of maintenance. Another reason hich is not so freely given out, is said to be the fact that the more money spent the more men employed, and the corresponding increase in political force. One interesting point in the item of expense came up last week when it was found that a number of the copper pipes in the internal economy of the Columbia had become damaged by electrolytic action that they had to be taken out and replaced by new These pipes are expensive, and the numher and value of the supply needed by a ship the size of the Columbia makes their rapid deterioration a subject of grave importance. It was said by an official of the steam engineering bureau that the coppersmiths were working overtime in the effort to get the task completed with as little delay as possible, and that while the pipes taken out of the Columbia had been in existing on them as on the flyer the probability was that there would have to be an extensive overhauling within a short time. The chemical and electric action which has had this result is one to which all the new steel ships are liable, and the problem of guarding against it is now engaging the minds of experts. It is known they are anchored or tied up near a ship sheathed of regulations covering the mooring of naval but this insidious foe within the vitals of the ship itself is a more difficult thing to encounter, and fully as dangerous to the welfare and usefulness of the vessel.

The training-ship Essex is expected to leave the yard to-morrow for Newport, R. I., where she will take on apprentices for her usual winter cruise. Her itinerary is as follows: Leave Newport about January 15, arrive Barbadoes February 9, leave February 19; arrive St. Kitts February 26, leave March 11; arrive St. Thomas March 13, leave March 23; arrive La Guayra March 31, leave April 11; arrive Kingston, Jamalca, April 14, leave April 21; arrive Key West May 5, leave May 15; arrive Savannah May 20, leave May 27; arrive Gardiner's Bay

FINISHING THE BIG NEW DRYDOCK. Tide water has been washing the caisson of the big new drydock No. 3 for the last few days, but the dock will not be ready by the first of next month, as had been announced. There is a great deal of work to be done in connection with removing the old quay wall which formed the bank of the Wallabout Channel where the entrance to the new dock is being built, and already the old stone ways are piled high with stone taken from the wall. It is expected that this work will be finished within a fortnight, and then the dredgers can finish removing the mud from in front of the caisson. The repairs on the exhaust or drainage pipes are nearly completed, the final connections, at the elbow where the pipes turn from the dock toward the pumphouse, being in hand. There is some trouble with the water which leaks into the dock from spaces between the altars on the westerly side, near the entrance, but it is thought that this can be remedied without much delay, and the leaks are not considered dangerous. Some of the altars have been taken out and new ones put in place, but the drainage system of the dock is pretty near perfection, and as the soil is in places little better than a quick-rand it is expected that there will always be a slight seepage through the wooden walls. The built, and already the old stone ways are piled sand it is expected that there will always be a slight seepage through the wooden walls. The middle of February is now set for the final work to be completed, and unless present plans are changed the Brooklyn will be the first ship to cross the sill of the new structure.

There is still some trouble in getting enough men of the right sort to make up the complements of the ships it is intended to place in commission, and there may be some delay in sending out the full fleet owing to this trouble. On nearly all the ships there are vacancies in the enginerooms, and machinists and engineers are runly all the ships there are vacancies in the engine-rooms, and machinists and engineers are run-ning short-handed. There are hopes that action will be taken by Congress looking to an increase in the force, and officers interested are pointing out the urgent need for relief measures. In-stances are cited where engine-rooms which should have four men are struggling along with two, and the whole situation is far from satis-factory to those on whom rests the responsibility for keeping the ships moving. for keeping the ships moving.

VESUVIUS'S TORPEDO TUBES STILL GOOD. Considerable interest is shown in the placing in commission of the dynamite thrower Vesuvius. and the statements which have been published in several papers that her torpedo lubes have been removed are wrong. They are in as good condition for throwing aerial torpedoes and as fit for service to-day as they were when they made their wonderfully accurate target practice at Port Royal. They will also have the advantage of torpedo projectiles, carrying fifty, 200 or 500 pounds of nitro-gelatine, and these projectiles are now fitted with percussion fuses that will explode whenever they strike. As the range will explode whenever they strike. As the range of the fifty-pound shells is more than three miles, and the 200-pounders carry about two miles, it will be seen that the craft is a powerful weapon in an attack on shore fortifications. While lying at an absolutely safe distance from a fort in the night time the Vesuvius might destroy a whole garrison by a half-dozen torpedoes. She will not take her torpedoes with her when she salls for the Southern coast, but it is remarked by those who have their eves on possible Cubes. those who have their eyes on possible Cuban complications that they could be sent to her in a short time. She is slated to go into commission on January 12.

A SAILORS' REST TALKED OF.

"Jacky" ashore is to have comfortable quarters, where he will be free from the demoralizing influences of the disreputable resorts he is prone to frequent, if the plans set on foot by officers attached to the station, and headed by Captain F. J. Higginson, captain of the yard, are carried into effect. In speaking of the proposed plan, "The Army and Navy Journal" says:

The Army and Navy Journal" says:

These officers are proposing to establish a Sailors' Rest, after the model of foreign institutions of that character, and they have to encourage them the evidence of the great success of such institutions abroad. It is proposed to locate the Rest in the immediate vicinity of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and to make it a place so attractive to the Jackies that they will seek it in preference to wasting their money and destroying health and reputation in the disreputable resorts of Greater New-York. The plan includes all the usual comforts and conveniences of ciub life-sleeping rooms, a restaurant, baths, barber shops and possibly a safe deposit valuables. If the plan is carried out with wisdom, as it promises to be, the rest will become a home, for the better class of sailors, and will encourage their enlistment in the United States service. It is intended to raise from $150,000 to $200,000 to purchase the necessary grounds and erect the building, for which the site has aiready been prospectively selected. To obtain this money an appeal will be made to the liberal-hearied cilizens of New-York, who are always ready to bestow their largers upon institutions that awaken their sympathies and secure their confidence. Captain Higginson has very encouraging promises of assistance from this class of men. To bring them together and ascertain what they are individually willing to do, a meeting will be held in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce, New-York, next week. The fact that the Chamber has been willing to allow this use of its rooms is in itself encouraging evidence of interest in the enterprise.

Invitations to attend this meeting have been sent to a large number of prominent gentlemen, and it is hoped that most of them will be able to be present. Those invited represent that class of patriotic and public-spirited citizens from whom our Government obtained many millions in voluntary contributions during our Civil War. They are intelligent men, and cannot fail to understand that if it was wise to spend so much money to carry on a great war, involving the honor of the country and the perpetuity of its institutions, it is equally wise to spend some small part of the vast sums expended upon war in taking measures to prevent war.

There has been a very great improvement in re-war.

There has been a very great improvement in recent years in the character of the men enlisting for our Navy, and the Navy officers having the welfare of the service at heart should be encouraged in still further improving an institution whose credit involves National honor and National self-respect. They will not be found backward in contributing to the Sallors' Rest to the extent of their ability but the pecuniary responsibility involved is beyond their possibilities. Hence this appeal to others, who have an equal interest with them in the success of this excellent enterprise.

DR. DIXON MUST DECIDE.

THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH ASKS FOR A DEFI-NITE ANSWER TO ITS CALL.

The First Baptist Church, of the Eastern District, formerly in charge of the Rev. Dr. Danlel Eddy, has sent an ultimatum to the Rev. Joseph K. Dixon, of the Penn Avenue Baptist Chur Penn., giving until February 1 next for Dr. Dixon to or decline the call recently extended to him This places Dr. Dixon in a peculiar position. friends say that he was in hopes of having the time extended for several months, in order to make easier for him to sever his relations with the S-ranton church. Dr. Dixon accepted a call to the church in Scranton shortly after the death of Dr. Eddy last year, going there on September 1. Before he left he was informally told that the vacant pulpit in the First Church was his if he would accept it. He wanted to accept, but as he had already accepted the Scranton call he could not see his way clear. Then he tried as delicately as possible to get a release from the Scranton people, but they were alpearently steadfast in the helief that Dr. Dixon was an acceptable preacher, and would not release him. Now comes the imperative demand from the Brooking church for a decisive answer. It is likely that Dr. Dixon will repeat his request to the Scranton church to release him. The First Church public is a desirable one. The church is at Lee-ave, and Keapst. It was organized in 1839, and its present membership is about five hundred. The Sanday-school has a membership of 388. The church has 800 sittings and the chapel 709. First Church was his if he would accept it. He

He did this after learning that his attempt to escape had been discovered. Mc-Glory was sentenced for six months on September 29, the charge being intoxication. Recently he attacked a fellow-prisoner with a chisel. McGlory formerly escaped from the Washington Insane He attempted the same thing at the penitentiary, and had almost succeeded in the useless work of digging his way into the cell at the rear of his own. The discovery was made when the cell was cleaned. This is the second attempt at suicide at the penitentiary within three days, and Warden Hayes says that lack of employment is having a bad effect on the prisoners.
